About the League

The Cerebral Palsy League of Queensland was formed in 1948 by a group of concerned parents, to provide services not available from government or other community agencies.

The League currently assists thousands of people with cerebral palsy and related disabilities to lead fulfilling lives.

While support needs vary through the different stages of life, the League gives particular emphasis to early intervention. Services are provided to target children at an early age, which is fundamental in realising or maximising future life opportunities.

As a not-for-profit organisation, the League struggles to obtain sufficient funding, so we need your support to ensure we can continue to make a difference in the lives of people with cerebral palsy and related disabilities.

About Cerebral Palsy

Cerebral palsy is a condition usually caused by brain damage occurring at or before birth. It is marked by muscular impairment resulting in difficulties with movement and posture. Often accompanied by poor coordination, it sometimes involves speech and learning difficulties.

Cerebral palsy is not hereditary so it can occur in any family. It is estimated in Australia that a child is born with cerebral palsy every 15 hours. It is the most common physical disability in childhood and there is no cure.

Cerebral palsy can be grouped into three main types which describe the disorders of movement and posture that may be experienced. These are:

Spasticity

Spasticity occurs when muscles are high in tone (tension), but weak in strength. A person with spasticity may have trouble moving their limbs or adopting a stable position.

Athetosis

Athetosis refers to uncontrollable movements which are often most noticeable when a person with this type of cerebral palsy commences movement.

Ataxia

Ataxia is characterised by unsteady, shaky movements or tremor. A person with this form of cerebral palsy has difficulty using their muscles to achieve balance and coordinated movement.

With appropriate support, people with cerebral palsy can lead personally fulfilling lives and make a valuable contribution to the community.
